EDITORIAL NOTE TO THE REVISED EDITION

This edition, succeeding the first, which was published in 1979, has been prepared to meet the needs primarily of students of C. G. Jung's writings working in English. Accordingly, it records (through 1991) only publications in English and in German, besides the very few writings in other languages for which Jung was, in some sense, directly responsible. Those include a few short works that he wrote in French.

The first edition recorded through 1975 not only publications in German and English but those translated into seventeen other languages: Danish, Dutch, Finnish, French, Greek, Hebrew, Hungarian, Italian, Japanese, Norwegian, Portuguese, Russian, Serbo-Croatian, Slovenian, Spanish, Swedish, and Turkish. The bibliography volume of the Gesammelte Werke, published by Walter-Verlag, Olten, Switzerland, in 1983, extended the chronology to that year and recorded translations in nineteen languages besides English (a few works in Persian and Polish having been added). Regrettably, it has not been possible for the editors of either of the collected editions to trace the numerous translations that have appeared subsequently—a task for the next generation. Thus the limitation of the present version of the bibliography to the German and English publications.

At this point, the canon of Jung's work is virtually complete in print. The twenty volumes of the Collected Works are published, including those devoted to the bibliography and the index. Some of the text volumes are in second editions (and reprints have been frequent, though not recorded here). Two supplementary volumes, unanticipated in the original plan, have now appeared. The project of editing and publishing Jung's "seminar notes," which had been canceled, has been revived; three of the seminars have been published and others are in preparation. Several anthologies and numerous paperback extracts are now available in the United States, the United Kingdom, and the other English-speaking countries. Most if not all of the paperbacks are accounted for in the bibliography.

The eighteen text volumes of the Gesammelte Werke, as well as the bibliography volume and two volumes of the seminars, have now been published by Walter-Verlag, successors to Rascher Verlag; the index volume is in preparation. A large number of anthologies and paperback extracts have issued from Swiss and German houses.

In the preparation of the present edition, the editor has had indispensable cooperation from Helga Egner, of Walter-Verlag. Others who gave significant assistance were David Stonestreet, of Routledge (successors to Routledge & Kegan Paul); Ingeborg Meyer-Palmedo, of S. Fischer Verlag; Doris Albrecht, of the Kristine Mann Library, New York; Joan Alpert, of the Virginia Allan Detloff Library, C. G. Jung Institute of San Francisco; and Verena Maag, of the C. G. Jung Institute, Küsnacht/Zurich. At Princeton University Press, Deborah Tegarden and Timothy Mennel have been notably constructive colleagues.

From the editorial note in the first edition, the following information is relevant. It has been the editors' intention to record the initial publication of each original work by Jung, each translation (in the first edition, into any language; now, into English or German), and substantial revisions and/or expansions, with reciprocal cross-references. Unrevised reprints have not been recorded unless brought out by a different publisher or altered in format. The Collected Works and the Gesammelte Werke are listed separately, in volume sequence, on facing pages.

Michael Fordham, who originally compiled the bibliography in the late 1940s as a working tool for the planning of the English collected edition, based his draft on a list published by Jolande Jacobi in her The Psychology of C. G. Jung (cf. E. 1942c); he was indebted also to Professor Jung's secretary at that time, Marie-Jeanne Schmid. Fordham's version underwent revision and augmentation by the editorial staff in a printed version privately distributed to workers in the field. The preparation of a definitive general bibliography was undertaken by A.S.B. Glover. After his death, in 1966, the work was carried on, under the present editor's supervision, first by Jasna P. Heurtley (who was notably effective in locating foreign translations) and then by the former librarian of the Kristine Mann Library, Lisa Ress, who was responsible for what achieved publication. Assistance that is reflected in the present edition came from Aniela Jaffé, Mr. and Mrs. Franz Jung (whose house, at Küsnacht, was the repository of Professor Jung's library), and the editors and publishers of the Gesammelte Werke.

II

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF C. G. JUNG DIE GESAMMELTEN WERKE VON C. G. JUNG

The contents of the two editions are coordinated on facing pages. Paragraph numbers (column at right) are given only for the Collected Works; they are the same for the Gesammelte Werke except for discrepancies in volumes 6, 8, 11, and 14, which are explained in each volume. Page numbers are given in () following each title. The cross-references indicate, in general, the immediate derivation of each work, with further references as may be useful.

For the volumes of the Gesammelte Werke, the listings from GW 19 have been substituted (updated insofar as feasible), with the permission of Walter-Verlag, Olten, Switzerland. In references to the bibliographical entries, "D" (Deutsch) = "G" (German).
